A Letter From Your Farmers

Monday, Oct. 2

Greetings! Here on the farm, we are enjoying the fall weather along with the grasshoppers who are gleefully having their meal of week seeds and more. They hop around me in all directions as I walk out in the produce patch.

How did you like the black radishes!? Weren't they interesting?! They were new for us, and we thought they were tasty. They are kind of like little moons, reminding us of our shorter days. Now that it gets dark so early, we're not able to work much in the fields into the late evenings anymore.

We are still finding so much enjoyment in filling your boxes each week. It will surely seem like something is missing when the CSA season is over. There is a lot of flurry, excitement, and happy fellowship in the packing barn when we prepare your boxes. Everyone has their special job.

Some of the walnuts have begun to fall from our trees, and the race is on to gather a few before the squirrels get them! Last year, the little rascals got most all the good ones.

In our yard, we have a tree that was taken over by honey bees. We would very much like to get at some of that honey, but the hole that the bees use is so small that we'd have to cut the tree down to get at the honey. We don't want to do that, as it would ruin the bee's cozy home, so we'll just let them have their honey for their winter meals, which is, after all, what they've worked so hard for.

Best wishes until next time! Stay warm from the inside out.
Many thanks for your support of our farms, Rachel
